The Fleeting Show.

The picture that is being shown at the Colonial today comes at an especially interesting time. So far as the general public is concerned, knowledge of Mexico and Mexican conditions is largely a matter of surmise. Therefore, "A Trip Through Barbarous Mexico" is interest-ing not only because it shows real right-ing and real warfare and real scenes of real battles, but because it also shows so much of the Mexican domestic life. The bull fighting is novel, the cavalry marches and drills, the various street scenes in Mexico City are all beautiful and in-structive. The most exciting part of the picture is found in a steeplechase race nine miles long, which starts with about fifteen contestants and finishes with four others having literally "dropped
